

Will American Troops Stationed In Siberia Be Withdrawn Or Reinforced If Allies Drop Fight Against Bolshevism?

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 2.—A school of thought with most momentous consequences for the future of the world has been taken by the British cabinet. The public is now being carefully prepared for the announcement that Great Britain no longer will support war against the bolsheviks. To save Russia from the new, possibly will be tried out and given its deathblow.

As the policy of the other great powers, with the exception of France and Japan, has already turned toward non-intervention, Britain's move seems likely to be decisive. Only great victories no longer hoped for whereby Kolchak, Denikin and the army under Yudenich operating against Petrograd in a change the results of the foreign office.

France must submit, in effect, Britain has said to France, that no more good money can be poured after her. It is billions of French francs are locked up in the Russian revolution. The British government has decided to stop the flow of money to Russia, with no chance of getting a penny back and no success.

As Britain, not France, has become the heart of opposition and support of the anti-bolshevik armies, France can do nothing when Lloyd George decides that Japan May Act Alone as Other Powers Prepare to Renounce Use of Force Against Reds; Britain Has Enough and Is Ready to Back Out; French Desire to Restore Stable Government Helpless Before Lloyd George's Determination; Speculation as to United States Attitude Rife; Problem Puzzles European Observers.

...and Japan? For the island empire, the decision reached by Britain is momentous and disappointing. The United States, who in thousands of soldiers in Siberia now that the last Englishman has left Russian soil, may very soon be called upon to defend her own position in the far east.

Japan Must Show Hand.

On good authority I have it that the financial and economic forces of the western European countries are to be no longer placed at the disposal of the anti-bolsheviks. How does this affect our policy in the far east? It compels the Japanese to show their hand, and quickly, in Siberia. And the prediction made to me last spring in Paris that within a year the Pacific would become the theatre of the world war may be realized within the time limit.

Japan Khrushchev has urged by agreement with, and consent with, the allies and America in Siberia. When the allies withdraw support from Kolchak and all his subordinates, Japan must either accept this Japan Seeking Help from U.S. Asks American Aid In Stamping Out Threatening Bolshevism.

Tokyo, Japan, Dec. 2.—(By The Associated Press.)—The eastward march of bolshevik forces has developed a suddenly serious problem for Japan, which is gravely concerned over the interests of law and order in China, Manchuria and the Russian Pacific littoral may necessitate a military campaign on a large scale.

The convention by which the allies have operated in eastern Siberia may be unavailing in the face of the bolsheviks, and the Japanese government and may request moral, financial and even military support.

Counting Friends.

Although some newspapers continue to talk about understanding between Japan and America, the impression is steadily growing here that the people who are actually conducting the affairs of the empire will seek not only to cement the friendship between the two countries, but to cooperate with America in the widest sense in the solution of all far eastern problems. For the moment the greatest problem is bolshevism.

Counting Friends.

The first public note sounded for the necessity of a common defense against the bolsheviks was struck by the Japanese government when it requested the United States to send troops to Siberia on November 13. He said: "All party and selfish considerations of a racial and economic character should be merged into the vast consideration of this common defense."

Elaborate preparations have been made to welcome Admiral Albert Khrushchev, commander of the Russian Pacific fleet, who will arrive here on board the cruiser South Dakota, December 4.
